

On Saturday, November 18 at 3 p.m., Corky Quirk comes to San Pedro Valley Park visitor center with her live bats and tales of the fascinating world of these fancy flyers. Her little disabled bats will gobble mealworms on-site while you watch the action on our big screen. Corky leads family and school hikes in the Yolo bypass bridge locale near Davis. After getting her B.S. from California State University (Humboldt) in natural resources and environmental education, she became fascinated by bats and concerned about their future, establishing NorCalBats to rescue and rehabilitate them, and educate people as to bats' vital contribution to our ecosystems. Bring yourself and your school-age children, grandchildren, and neighbor kids.