

Environmental safeguards are under attack by the Trump Administration, which has announced plans to dramatically weaken the Endangered Species Act, putting our most vulnerable species at risk of extinction.

Fortunately, the California legislature has an excellent opportunity to protect our state from the Trump rollbacks. SB1 — The California Environmental, Public Health, and Workers Defense Act — would create a state backstop against federal policies aimed at weakening environmental safeguards. The bill has already passed through the State Senate and is now making its way through the Assembly.

Our friends at National Resources Defense Council (NRDC) have created an easy-to-use website that allows you to contact your Assembly member and Governor Newsom. Please visit <https://act.nrdc.org/letter/af-ca-sb1-190314> and weigh in on this critical issue.

Peter Drekmeier, Tuolumne River Trust